Re: Request for Extension of Comment Period for Proposed Rule on Semiannual Reporting (Rel. Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368; File No. S7-2026-15)

Dear Ms. Countryman:

The undersigned associations (the "Associations")[1] write to request that the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC" or the "Commission") grant an extension of 60 days of the comment deadline, from July 6, 2026 to September 4, 2026, for the above-referenced rule proposal regarding semiannual reporting (the "Proposal"). The Proposal would allow reporting companies to elect to file semiannual reports on new Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q.[2]

The comment deadline falls on the first business day following the nation's commemoration of the 250th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence: a milestone the White House has described as "the most important milestone in our country's history."[3] Market participants, issuers, investors, and their advisers will understandably be occupied with events and commitments surrounding this historic occasion.[4] The Commission has also recognized in prior rulemakings that extensions are appropriate where proposals raise complex and interrelated issues. Providing additional time here would be consistent with that practice and would facilitate a more complete and informative comment record.

A. Importance of the Proposal to market participants

The Associations' memberships include a diverse set of investment advisers and fund managers, servicing institutional, high-net worth, and retail clients. Investment advisers' strategies depend on timely, consistent, and comparable public company disclosure, including disclosure of financial information. The Proposal would fundamentally restructure a disclosure framework that has required quarterly reporting by U.S. public companies for more than 55 years.

If adopted, the proposed reforms will have profound consequences for issuers, investors (both institutional and retail), and the functioning of U.S. capital markets. It would alter the frequency with which investors receive material financial information and fundamentally change the information environment upon which investment decisions are made. Accordingly, the Proposal raises significant issues for the Associations' members and their clients, including the timeliness and completeness of information available to market participants, the comparability of issuer disclosures across reporting regimes, and the functioning of public markets that have relied upon regular, quarterly disclosure.

B. Need for additional time to synthesize member views and develop empirical data for the Commission

The Proposal raises complex legal, economic, operational, and market-structure questions requiring consultation across investment, risk, compliance, and operational functions. The current comment period does not provide sufficient time to fully solicit and synthesize the member views of each Association or provide the Commission with a comprehensive industry perspective.

More fundamentally, the Proposal raises important empirical questions regarding the role quarterly reporting plays in promoting market transparency, price discovery, capital formation, and investor protection. Meaningful comments on the Proposal require more than anecdotal views; they require empirical analysis, consultation with market participants, and careful evaluation of the extensive academic literature regarding the effects of reporting frequency. A 60-day extension would allow the Associations and their members to develop data-driven evidence regarding the importance of quarterly reporting and the potential implications of reduced reporting frequency. Additional time would therefore materially improve the quality, depth, and usefulness of the comment record available to the Commission.

C. The Commission's broader work on disclosures

The SEC has undertaken a number of initiatives to assess disclosure requirements. It has been suggested that the SEC may need to consider some of these issues in conjunction with one another.[5]

For example, in May 2026, the Commission issued two significant, foundational proposals addressing: (I) registered offering reform, including expanded Form S-3 eligibility and related disclosure mechanics; and (ii) expanded "emerging growth company" accommodations and a revised filer status framework (the "Registered Offering and Filer Status Reform proposals").[6] The Registered Offering and Filer Status Reform proposals would meaningfully affect the scope and content of issuer disclosures, while the Proposal would affect the frequency and timing of those disclosures. The combined effect of these initiatives will determine whether investors continue to receive information that is timely, comparable, and decision-useful.

The Associations support strengthening the U.S. public markets through a thoughtful review of the public company disclosure framework. Because these proposals collectively address the scope, content, and timing of issuer disclosures, however, they should not be considered in isolation. At a minimum, commenters should be afforded sufficient time to evaluate the Proposal alongside the Registered Offering and Filer Status Reform proposals and assess their combined effects on investors and the capital markets.

If the compressed comment schedule is maintained, commenters would face significant challenges to comment meaningfully not just on the Proposal but on the Registered Offering and Filer Status Reform proposals as well. We appreciate recent questions about whether the cadence of issuer financial reporting should be considered in conjunction with the Commission's broader assessment of disclosure requirements.[7] A reasonable extension is therefore warranted so that market participants can provide the
